Kratos Discontinues Proposed Refinancing Effort

Total Current Combined Upfront Refinancing Cost and New Recurring Interest Cost Would Exceed Company's Objective for Reduction of Total Cost of Capital of Existing Senior Notes, Due June 2017

SAN DIEGO, CA, November 25, 2013 – Kratos Defense & Security Solutions, Inc. (NASDAQ:KTOS), a leading National Security Solutions provider, announced today that it has discontinued a proposed refinancing of its $625 million Senior Notes, due June 2017, as the total combined upfront refinancing cost and new recurring interest cost would not achieve the Company's objective for an opportunistic reduction of the net present value total cost of capital of the Company's existing Senior Notes, due June 2017, based on current market conditions.

Eric DeMarco, Kratos' President and CEO, said, "We have previously stated that we would opportunistically consider refinancing our existing Senior Notes, due June 2017, which have a No Call provision through May 2014, only if the combined cost of the early retirement of the Notes, the subsequent leverage for our Company, and the terms, conditions, and future interest rate of the new debt would achieve a pre-determined total refinancing financial objective and rate of return. Following exploration of current market conditions, and even though investor interest was strong, we have made the decision not to consummate a transaction at this time, as the overall cost and financial rate of return to our Company would not achieve our pre-determined financial objectives. Accordingly, we will continue to evaluate the cost of a potential refinancing of our existing Senior Notes, weighing related market conditions and the opportunity to refinance our Notes at the most appropriate time. Importantly, Standard and Poor's Ratings Services and Moody's Investor Service recently reaffirmed their respective credit ratings of B and B3 of the Company, noting that Kratos is fairly well positioned in relatively high-priority areas of the defense budget and that Kratos' product portfolio is positioned in areas where funding levels are less vulnerable, including unmanned aerial and missile systems, satellite communications, electronic warfare, radar and signals processing." Mr. DeMarco concluded, "As we stated a few weeks ago in our third quarter earnings call, we are forecasting approximately ten percent sequential organic revenue and Adjusted EBITDA growth for our fiscal 2013 fourth quarter, positive free cash flow generation, a reduction in DSOs and strong bookings. Additionally, we continue to make progress with our unmanned aerial system initiative, and last week we had a very successful flight of one of our highest performance unmanned aerial systems at extremely low altitude at an ocean range. Also importantly, late last week, House Speaker Boehner stated that another Government shutdown will not happen, and that the House will pass another Continuing Resolution if the Budget Committee is not able to reach agreement by December 13, which would provide additional visibility and predictability to the industry and Kratos' fiscal 2014."
